Humankindess

Hello humankindess! Robin Permaul has exemplified the meaning of humankindness by showing it to so many frontline workers across Southern California.

When the COVID-19 crisis hit our communities she wanted to help. The goal was to financially support local businesses, specifically restaurants that were being hit hard by the effects of this pandemic, while providing delicious meals for hospital ER, ICU, CCU, Telemetry, and Infectious Disease department staff who work tirelessly around the clock risking their own health and safety to take care of our community.

As of this week, $35,351 has been raised through the support of 347 local community donors. In turn, over 4,500 meals have been delivered to 12 hospitals across Southern California. Northridge Hospital Medical Center is one of these 12 lucky hospitals and we are so appreciative of the continued support since March.

Every Monday evening Robin has 75 meals delivered to our evening staff and we are beyond thankful to be able to provide these amazing meals that range from sandwiches and salads provided by Sylmar's Fix to chicken/beef/falafel kebab dinners from Mediterranean Pita Grill to burritos dinners from Los Ruizenores.

"We aim to provide delicious meals to our health care heroes while they are working long hours under difficult conditions. Many of the participating restaurants have graciously agreed to discount our orders so we can provide more meals. 100% of the money donated is used to buy the food directly from the restaurants. We, as a community, can come together and show our gratitude to all our hard-working health care providers on the frontlines while supporting local restaurants who also need our help," says Robin.

Thank you Robin for all your coordination and support to bring so many smiles to our frontline workers.
